

B(IF)TEK
2020 (Murmur/Sony)

This album is for everybody who thought they hated techno music. In fact B(if)tek prove that electronica can even be fun.

Taking a retro-futurist theme, ex-Canberra locals Kate Crawford and Nicole Skeltys had hoped to create tomorrow's music for today.

Like true post-modernists they borrow like bowerbirds, taking soundtrack samples from soap operas and creating all sorts of weird noises.

They even do a cover of Wired For Sound with vocals from Julee Cruse, the woman who sang the Twin Peaks theme.

Building on the "warmth" of analogue machinery, B(if)tek has created the ultimate in atmospheric albums — from cruisey, trippy sequences on We Think You're Dishy to the pumping Bedrock.

Play it loud to be hyped and low to chill — and enjoy.
